

Subject: Heads up Snow Forecast

It is hard to believe after today, but we have an Arctic cold front coming down meeting a moist pacific flow from the west. This combination will bring some significant snow to the mountain passes and likely some snow to the valley bottoms throughout the North Island. It is expected to start late Wed or early Thursday, then continue cold into the weekend. Forecasts range from 5cm to as high as 30cm in the mountains. Emcon will be out in various locations pre-brining roads with salt and scheduling extra employees and contractors in anticipation of the snowfall.

Please ensure your vehicle is winter ready, plan your travel ahead of time and allow extra time to arrive at your destination.

As always, road conditions can be found on Drivebc.ca and winter driving tips can be found on Shiftintowinter.ca

Please drive safe.
